

Wall Street Warfighters & STC

A prerequisite for a successful brokerage career is passage of securities licensing exams administered by the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA). Wall Street Warfighters Foundation's ability to build financial careers for disabled military veterans receives invaluable assistance from its partnership with Securities Training Corporation (STC), the leader in the financial services training industry.

STC's broad range of learning programs and study options (with training provided in 42 cities) are a good fit with the needs of disabled vets in the Foundation's six-month intensive program that throws many challenges at them simultaneously. STC's courses are customized to fit individual student needs. When students are recovering from combat injuries, this flexibility can make all the difference.

STC has donated text material and access to online on-demand courses, as well as participation in the four-day Series 7 course. STC's ongoing commitment to providing this training is a key part of the Foundation's program efforts.

Mission of the Wall Street Warfighters Foundation

The foundation is a 501(c) (3) assisting military veterans disabled since September 11, 2001 to find jobs and build careers in the financial services industry. The flagship training program is a six-month intensive business curriculum featuring classroom time, mini-internships with prospective employers, and study for securities license certification. The foundation is supported by corporate, government and private donors. Chairman of the Board is retired Marine General Peter Pace, former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Mission of Securities Training Corporation

Securities Training Corporation was founded in 1969 on Wall Street and has been assisting NYSE/NASD – FINRA-member firms with their regulatory examination training since the introduction of the very first NYSE exam. Four decades and more than 1,000,000 candidates later, STC has become the leading provider of training solutions dedicated solely to the financial services industry. In an industry that has weathered many changes, STC remains a privately held business, focused on our commitment to provide superior products and services to our clients.
